Wrist Watches That Hold Alcohol To Be Used In "Stimulating" Near Beer Worn By Men In Colorado.

People who never carried watches before, says the Denver Post, are toting them around in Colorado. No longer are rude remarks uttered regarding the youth whose lily-white arm is adorned with a wrist watch.
He has plenty of imitators. Gentimen have been seen going downtown in Denver with clocks under their arms, presumably taking them to be repaired. Several others—this is only vague rumor—have been talking of carrying along grandfather's hall clocks which are sadly out of order.

One thing is certain. Denver is keeping in close touch with Father Time.

As in states that are "wet," Colorado citizens still ask:
"Have you the time?"
You know they have!

Listen to the Denver Post:
"Prohibition is the father of inec-nuity."

And the latest of its inventions is the "near beer watch."

On sale in several Denver jewelry shops and drug stores is a contrivance closely resembling a man's watch. The case is shaped exactly like that of a watch, and there is a lifelike stem.
But the stem unscrews, permitting the case to be filled with alcohol. One side of the case can be pressed in, and when this is done a stream of alcohol shoots out through a small hole in the stem.

To the gentleman who desires his daily beer in spite of prohibition, this "near beer watch" is a revelation and a thing of joy. He fills the receptacle with alcohol before he leaves home in the morning and whenever he wants a glass of real beer during the day he simply purchases a glass of near beer, adds a pinch of salt, and squirts into the mixture a little alcohol from his "watch." The result is said to be the equivalent of real beer.

These watches are made in hard rubber, silver and gold-plated steel.
They are finding considerable sale.

PROHIBITION BILL

Advanced in the House At Frankfort
By a Vote of 51 To 43, Thus Bringing Liquor Question
Up in Legislature
Again.

The House in the House suffered another defeat Tuesday at the hands of the drys when House Bill No. 35, introduced by Representative E. H.
Hamilton of Franklin county, was taken from the hands of the House Committee on Constitutional Amendments, where it had been peacefully slumbering since January 12 and put it into the calendar.

The vote was 51 to 43 and came after a short debate in which the drys were represented by Representative W. M. Webb of Johnson county, Representative Frank C. Greene of Carroll county, and others, after Representative David J. Howard of Woodford county, who made the motion, had appealed to the members to dispose of the bill, so that the "restraint on the business of this House, which has been evident the past week," may be removed.

The proposition came too early in the day for the wets to attempt a fluster, such as was led successfully Monday by Representative William Duffy of Louisville, and while some of the dry members voted against the motion out of respect for the committee, refusing to take the bill up until the committee had "had a chance to report it."

The fifty-one votes cast, therefore, do not represent the full strength of the drys in the House and they may muster the other nine votes necessary to pass the bill and thus put it up again to the Senate, which has rejected it by a vote of 20 to 14, a proposition for statewide prohibition.

HOBBIES

A prominent physician tells us that "hobbies" are healthy things for us to have, and we feel that we must be blessed with unusually good health, as we have ALWAYS had a hobby-- and it's

HARNESS!

Years ago, when leather sold for nineteen cents a pound, our boast was that we made the best harness that could be made of good leather, good thread and good workmanship.
Now, when that same kind of leather is selling for forty-nine and fifty cents a pound, we still maintain that we have the best harness that can be made. All you have to do to prove that we are telling you facts is to go to the next "sale," and hear Col. Hensley Hawkins say in that musical drawl for which he is so famous, "This is a set, gentlemen, of Mike Brown's Harness. What do you bid?" Then when you can see the farmer "set up and take notice," for he knows there will be some bidding on that harness.

This is the time of the year, when Harness is foremost in every farmer's mind, and this is the time of the year, also, when we are ready to sell him. All winter long our men have been making up harness for Spring trade, and now we are ready. Of course, it's higher than when our grandfathers used to buy it, but, considering the price of leather, it's a wonder how low in price and high in quality the Square Deal harness is.

Come in, gentlemen, we are ready to rig up those horses.

AN OBJECT LESSON IN GOOD ROADS.

Some surprising reports of progress were made at the International Road Congress, held at Worcester, Mass., last week. Perhaps the most notable came from the Province of Quebec, Canada. Five years ago there were practically no macadam or gravelled roads in that province. Today it has 1,200 miles macadam, 500 of gravelled roads, 10,000 new concrete bridges and culverts and 250 macadam plants pushing new work.

When you consider that Quebec is a country of scattered people, few cities of any size, and total population of only 2,000,000, this advance seems remarkable. How many of our states are doing as well, in proportion to population or wealth? Quebec will soon place its cattle, oats, hay and apples on the market at lower rates, and be still more formidable competitor.

Every state in the Union should take note of these developments elsewhere, and ask if it is keeping up with the procession. The cost of living is needlessly high because of the cost of getting food to the markets. Manufactured products, loaded from factory to a railroad side track, have not risen much. It is the food products, drawn over poor roads in small loads, that cost high.

Every farm district needs a good hard road to serve the industrial community efficiently. With such highways, big motor trucks will circle about the back districts, and pick up their great loads at a small cost.

It is interesting to note that Quebec got its new roads by treating the road question as a state problem. It did not attempt to make the local community pay the whole cost. The provincial government got busy and borrowed $15,000,000.

In the United States, the consumer in towns and cities will get quite as much benefit from low transportation costs as the farmer. He would be willing to take his share in liberal state taxes for road improvement.

ABUSES OF COLLEGE ATHLETICS.

There is a tempest of discussion over abuses of college athletics. These questions were threshed out by the National Collegiate Athletic Association at their meeting, with ex-President Taft as a leading speaker. Whether the association will accomplish any positive results remains to be seen.

American youth does not enter sport for the impersonal satisfaction of the trained skill of eye and hand. It is a problem of defeating dratted rival colleges, which must be met or disgrace accepted. If a man who is practically a professional can be captured, there are devious ways enough of passing him along. The system with which the "prep school" field is canvassed for recruits is exceeded by nothing in the line of efficiency except the recruiting organization of the German army.

Perhaps the greatest abuse is that athletic training is so much concentrated on the demigods of the varsity team, while the great majority of the students do not get systematic physical culture. Time spent yelling on the grand stands, or discussing the latest details about the pitcher's throwing arm, is not time spent in physical development.

Much could be said for a system in which college students would be required to spend a period of time daily in some active sport. Many of the boys would become so keenly interested in the problem of developing their own skill, that the interest in the welfare of the team should lose a little of its abnormal fever.

This would provide a splendid safety valve for surplus energy. It would lay up a stack of physical capacity for the strains of future years. It is a more normal kind of development than the coach trained man gets, and it would not absorb such undue attention.

No matter how he finally decides the controversy, Mr. Wilson is bound to be the loser in the contest over the New York City post-office. If he yields to Tammany and appoints its man in the face of those who call themselves "the better element," he will meet a loss in prestige among his thick-and-thin supporters. He has already intimated his willingness to oblige Tammany in this matter and the outcry has been prolonged and bitter—even the reform Democratic mayor of New York joining in it. On the other hand, if he should now fail to appoint the Tammany man upon whom he has looked with favor, he will incur further enmity at the hands of the Murphy men and will be subject to the reproach that he lacked the nerve to go through with the business after he had embarked upon it.

Why censure Mr. McAdoo because he has appointed five or six cousins, nephews and nieces to Federal office in and around New York? That is the well-established custom of this administration. McAdoo is himself the President's son-in-law. Bryan has two sons at the public crib. Secretary Wilson's daughter has had hers from the Federal treasury. While to enumerate the minor officeholders who have hunted out some of the lesser things to their own kin would be to fill up a column of fine newspaper type, McAdoo may have been wrong in naming his relatives for office, but he was strictly in observance of the traditions of this administration.

The Springfield Republican admits that "the Republican party has always been, in this generation, the party of power and efficiency—what there is of it in America." This is indeed praise from Sir Hubert when one regards the attitude of the Republican toward the Republican party in this generation. It may be unfair to infer that the Springfield Republican prefers a party of weakness and inefficiency—but it has of late been found in opposition to the Republican party at any rate.

The Colonel has ordered his name off the primary ticket in Michigan, too. The Colonel, you see, wants Wilson beaten. And the Colonel is a practical man.

Conscription is never resorted to in this country except to draft a man for Vice President once in four years.

It is surprising how the hens are encouraged to lay by the news that eggs are rapidly falling in price.

We don't care how much you fuss us, but don't profane our sensitive ears with such discordant noises.

Bought Good Mules.

(Oldham News Era.)

Matthew Wakefield of Shelbyville, on Wednesday bought ten of the finest mules ever shipped out of Oldham county. They were all mare mules, and weighed from 1,300 to 1,450 pounds. Seven were bought from Clay Johnson for $1,500; two from E. S. Petty for $425, and one from Blover Moss for $214. They were shipped to Shelbyville Wednesday on the Louisville & Nashville railroad.

Here's a Mystery.

(Dixon Journal.)

Judge G. E. Vaughn received an unusual letter this week containing a $10 bill with instructions that the money be turned over to the county school superintendent for the county institute. Superintendent Lloyd also received a letter stating that the money had been sent Judge Vaughn. Neither letter contained anything to show who the generous person was or where he lived, both being mailed on a train.

High Prices For Tobacco.

(Mt. Olivet Tribune-Democrat.)

Scott Insko of Central Ridge, heads the procession in high price for a crop of 1915 tobacco. His crop, raised last year, sold on the Maysville market the past week at the high average of $25.25 per hundred. The crop raised by Samuel Moore on the Stark Wheeler homestead on Kenton town pike, brought a fancy price also, realizing an average of $24.45. Other crops sold on the Maysville loose leaf breaks the past week, from Hobartson, brought extra good prices. One crop brought an average of $17.60 and one $16.88 per hundred. Robertson county still leads the procession.

February 10.

Baron Charles Borsford, famous British naval leader, who led in Parliament the fight for a monster British navy, is 70 years old today. He was made a baron at New Year's by King George, in recognition of his service on sea and land for the navy, and his forethought during the days of the establishment of the big navy policy. Lord Borsford was born at Waterford, Ireland, on February 10, 1846, the son of the Rev. John Borsford, the fourth Marquis of Waterford, and he entered the navy at the age of 13. He took part in the bombardment of Alexandria, and when the city was captured he was instituted there a fine police system. He served in many campaigns and has been many times honored. But is most proud of the three medals which he holds for saving life. Lord Borsford is a firm believer in peace, and in the efficiency of a large navy to insure peace. Baron Borsford has been one of the best debaters in the House of Commons, and his elevation to the House of Lords removes one of the ablest men from the Commons. He has written a great deal, with a vigorous style, and his essays and articles on naval affairs are widely read. Baron Borsford has been in America several times.

Hon. John A. Elston, new Congressman from California, 42 years old today.

Dr. Ira Hansen, noted chemist of Johns Hopkins University, 50 years old today.

Alexandre Millerand, former War Minister of France, 67 years old today.

Dr. Robert A. Falconer, president of Toronto University, 49 years old today.

Dr. Walter D. McCaw, noted American army surgeon, 53 years old today.

Dr. Milford Hall Lyon, Illinois evangelist, 48 years old today.

Certainly Unfortunate.

(Danville Advocate.)

Eugene Terhune of Harrodsburg, who several years ago sold and put out hundreds of rods of hedge fence in Hoyle county, is in Cincinnati under treatment in the Satter Hospital. While planting hedge in Hoyle county probably fifteen years ago, Mr. Terhune suffered the loss of his right eye when a twig struck that member. Some weeks ago while repairing a pair of clippers a spring came out and struck his left eye and practically destroyed the sight. He has undergone an operation and it is thought that the sight will be partially restored.

County Applies For $12,000.

(Larue County Herald.)

The Larue County Fiscal Court has made application to the State Road Department for $12,000 state aid money in 1916 to be used on the county's intercounty-seat roads. However, it is regarded as unlikely that the full amount will be obtained, the amount the county being eligible to receive being determined by the amount it pays into the state road fund, which would prevent it getting the full $12,000. But by the application made for largest amount possible for any county to get, Larue is sure to receive the largest amount it would be possible for it to get. The 1916 road fund will be between $9,000 and $10,000, this including money from the franchise taxes. The present percentage of taxes collected which goes to the road fund is 20 per cent, but it has been rumored that the Fiscal Court may make a change and instead of giving 20 per cent to the road fund and 20 per cent to the general fund may give 25 per cent to the roads and appropriate only 15 per cent to the general fund. Should this be done the total county road fund, exclusive of state aid, would be about $12,000, and with the amount of state aid possible to secure make the total amount of road money in excess of $18,000. The road fund of Larue county during the next five days, if judiciously handled, should build many miles of solid road.

"You can't stop and do it without me."
"Oh, yes, I can. I'll call for a volunteer from below. You show them your spurs and save your skin."
"Oh, I'll stay, curse you, I'll stay!"
"And I'll have my volunteer, whoever you say or not."

The pair had scarcely parted when the trapdoor opened slowly and stayed open for the first time. The voice of Stingaree came rich and crisp from behind the counter.

"Your old woman has got away to the police barracks and the place is surrounded. One of you has got to come up and help, and help fast, or get a bullet in his heart. I give you one minute to choose your man."

But in one second the man had chosen himself. Without a word, or a glance at any of his companions, but with a face burning with extraordinary fire, Fergus Currier sprang for the cleau edge of the trapdoor, caught it first with one hand and then with both, drew himself up like the gymnast he had been at his Scottish school and found himself prone upon floor and trapdoor as the latter closed under him on the release of the lever which Stingaree understood so well. A yell of exclamation followed him into the upper air. And Stingaree was across the counter before his new ally had poked himself up.

"That's because this was expected of me," said Fergus firmly, to explain the cashier's reiterated anathemas. "I was the writer of the registered letter that's led to all this. So now I'm going to the whole hog."

"You mean that? No nonsense?"
"You shall see."
"I should shoot you like a native cat."

"You couldn't do me a better turn?"
"Right! Swear on your knees that you won't use it against me or my mate and I'll trust you with this revolver. You may fire as high as you please, but they must think we're three instead of two."

Fergus took the oath in three earnest upon his knees, was handed the weapon belonging to the bank and posted in his own bedroom window at the rear of the building.

Currier saw heads and shoulders hunched to aim over stable doors as he obeyed his orders and kept his oath. His high fire drew a deadlier upon himself; a stream of lead whistled into the room past his ear.

Fergus sighed relief as he sought Stingaree and found him with a content face before the open safe.
"House full of paltry paper!" said he. "I suppose it's the old sportsman's custom to get rid of most of his heavy metal before closing on Saturdays?"

Fergus said it was. He had himself stowed many a strong box about unsuspected barges for Fergus.

"Well, now's our time to leave you," continued Stingaree. "If I'm not mistaken their flight is simply for the moment, and in two or three more they'll be back to better in the bank shutters. I wonder what they think we've done with our horses? I'll bet they've looked everywhere but in the larder next the kitchen door—not that we ever let them get so close. But my mate's in there now, mounted and waiting, and I shall have to leave you."

"But I was coming with you!" cried Fergus, almost.
Stingaree's eyelids danced on his cord.
"I'm afraid I must trouble you to step into the safe instead," said he, smiling.

"Man, I mean it! You think I don't? I've fought on your side of my own free will. How can I live that down? It's the only side for me for the rest of time."

"I believe you do mean it."
"You shall shoot me if I don't."
"I most certainly should. But my mate Howie has his obvious limitations. I've long wanted a drop of new blood. Harmauld's thoroughbred and strong as an elephant. We're neither of us heavyweights. By the powers, I'll trust you, and you shall ride behind!"

Now, Harmauld was the milk white mare that was only less notorious than her lawless rider. It was poised in travelers' huts and around campfires that she would do more at her master's word than had been known of horse outside a circus. It was the one touch that Stingaree had borrowed from a more Napoleonic but incomparably coarser and cruder knight of the bush.

In all other respects the up to date desperado was unique. It was a stroke of luck, however, that there happened to be an old white mare in the bank stable, which the police had impounded ed with solemn care while turning every other animal about. And so it fell out that not a shot followed the mounted bushrangers into the night.

Stingaree and Fergus sat saddle and bareback without a break until near dawn their pioneer spurred forward yet again and was swallowed in a steady haze. It was cold as a sharp evening night in England. But for a mile or more Fergus had clung on with but one arm round the bushranger's waist. Now the right arm came stumbling back; felt something cold for the fraction of a second.

"Pull up," said Fergus hoarsely, "or your brains go flying."
"Little traitor!" whispered the other, with an imprecation that froze the blood.

"I am no traitor. I swore I wouldn't abuse the revolver you gave me, and it's been in my pocket all the night."
"The other's unloaded."

"You wouldn't sit so quiet if it were. Now, round we go and back on our tracks full split. It's getting light and we shall see them plain. If you vary a yard either way or if your mate catches us out to your brains."

The bushranger obeyed without a word. Fergus was almost unmoved by the incredible ease of his conquest over so redoubtable a ruffian. His steady Scottish blood stood by him, but still he made grim apology as they rode.

"I had to do it. It was through me you got to know. I had to live that down; this was the only way."
"You have split. If you would still be my mate!"

"Your mate! I mean this to be the making of me as an honest man. Here's the fence. I give you two minutes to strap it down and get us over."

Stingaree slid tamely to the ground. "Don't you dare to get through those wires! Strap it from this side with your belt and strap it quick!"

And the bushranger obeyed with the same sensible docility, but with his back turned so that Fergus could not see his face, and it was light enough to see faces now, yet Barnard refused the visible wires, as she had not refused them all that night of indolgent staidness.

"Conx her, man!" cried Fergus, in the saddle now, and urging the mare with his heels. So Stingaree whispered in the mare's ear, and with that the strapping wires flew under his captor's nose, as the rider took the fence, but not the horse.

At a single syllable the milk white mare had gone on her knees, like devoted lady in holy awe, and as she rose her last rider lay senseless at her master's feet; but whether from his fall or from a blow dealt him in the act of falling, the unhappy Fergus never knew. Indeed, knowledge for him was at an end until matches burst under his nose awakened him to a position of the last humiliation. His throat and chin topped a fencepost, the weight of his body was on chin and throat, while wrists and muscles were lashed at full stretch to the wires on either side.

"Now I'm going to shoot you like a dog," said Stingaree. He drew the revolver whose muzzle had pressed into his own neck so short a time before. Yet now it was broad daylight, and the sun coming up in the bound youth's eyes for the last time.

"Shoot away!" he croaked, raising the top of his head to speak at all. "I gave you leave before we started. Shoot away!"

"At ten paces," said Stingaree, stepping them. "That, I think, is fair."
"Perfectly," replied Fergus. "But he kind enough to make this so called man of yours hold his foot tongue till I'm out of earshot of you all."

Huge Howie had muttered little enough for him, but to that little Stingaree put an instantaneous stop.

"He's a dog, to be shot like a dog, but too good a dog for you to blackguard!" cried he. "Any message, young fellow?"

"Not through you."
"So long, then!"
"Shoot away!"

The hammer fell, the cartridge crackled, and from the lifted muzzle a tiny cloud flowed like a bubble from a pipe. The post quivered under Currier's chin, and a splinter flew up and down before his eyes. But that was all.

"I was going to give you six of them. But you're a braver man than I thought."

The bound youth's livid face turned redder than the red dawn.
"Shoot me; shoot!" he shouted.

"No; I shall not. I never meant to. You're the most gallant little blot I've ever struck. Besides, you come from the old country, like myself."

"Then I'll shoot myself when I'm free," sobbed Fergus through his teeth. "You'll find it's not a bit worth while."

And when the mounted police and others from Glenora had discovered the trussed youngster, not an hour later, they took the same tone. And one and all stopped and stooped to peer at the two bullet holes in the post and at something underneath them before cutting poor Fergus down.

Then they propped him up to read with his own eyes the mailed legend which first helped Fergus Currier to live down the hideousness of his letter to Largs and then did more for him in that colony than letter from the king to his excellency of New South Wales, for it ran:

"This is the greatest little cock I have ever struck. He had me captive once, could have shot me alive and over again and all but took me alive. More power to him!"

SEEK NEW TRIAL FOR LOVE SWINDLE.

Chicago, February 10.—A motion for a new trial for Miss Lodovine Miller and her brother, Attorney J. Marion Miller, who were found guilty of operating a love confidence game, will be heard tomorrow. The brother and sister were recently convicted by a jury on the charge of swindling "Sentimental Tommy" Foulkes, a farmer of Danbury, Ia., out of $11,312 in cash and two farms valued at $40,000.

While a sister of Miss Miller it is charged that the Iowa farmer gave her and her brother cash and the farms and was reduced to poverty, working for his mere board and room.

After the five scenes were over and the alleged transfers of money and property were made, Foulkes claims Miss Miller gave him a Bible and told him to go to California and marry a rich widow.

The Millers were convicted twice of the love swindle. The first trial was in 1914, but they succeeded in gaining a rehearing. The jury found them guilty at the second trial, and now the Millers are seeking a third trial. They face imprisonment in the penitentiary of from one to ten years.

Mrs. Della Luneford, 328 E. Front St., Maysville, says: "I attribute kidney trouble to a strain. I had sharp, shooting pains through my kidneys and a dragging-down feeling through my hips. I had dull headaches and dizzy spells and often if I had not caught hold of something for support, I would have fallen. I was in that condition for several years, up one week and in bed the next. I finally began to notice symptoms of dropsy. My feet began to swell and my hands were at times the same way. Finally, I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they cured me."

EXCISE BOARDS

Bill To Create Them Now Before the Kentucky Legislature—Offered As a Substitute To the Greene Measure.

When the bills of Representative Frank C. Greene of Carrollton, giving to the Attorney General the right to abate by injunction saloons that violate the Sunday closing and other liquor laws, making liquor licenses forfeitable upon violation of the law, and giving to the Franklin Circuit Court jurisdiction in all cases, were called as a special order of business in the House—Wednesday morning, there was introduced as a substitute in bill creating a State Excise Commission and County Excise Commissions, to have control over all saloons in Kentucky. The Greene bills were intended to remedy conditions in Newport and Covington, but apply to saloons throughout the state.

Under the bill proposed the governor will be empowered to appoint three persons, not more than two of whom shall be affiliated with the same political party, and no two of whom shall be residents of the same county, to compose a State Excise Commission, and this commission, in turn, shall appoint three persons in each county, not more than two of whom shall be affiliated with the same political party, to serve as members of the County Excise Commissions.

The County Excise Commission shall pass upon all applications for licenses to sell liquor in that county and shall promulgate rules and regulations for the operation of saloons in the county. In case of violation of the Sunday closing or other liquor law the county commission may, upon the first offense, suspend a saloon license for sixty days and may, upon the second offense, revoke the license.

You not only do your eyes an injustice, but your neglect of your eyes may be causing some reflex trouble, such as headache, etc., which more than likely can be corrected by the properly adjusted glasses. It is stated by an eminent physician that 90 per cent of the headaches, especially pains above the eyes, are caused by eye strain.
